These schools can help students learn better with better facilities and equipment than those at public schools and let them move to the next education level without entrance exams. However, they can be expensive, and some students will have to try hard to make new friends.
5	I think so. First, hospitals can meet the increasing demand for medical care in foreign languages by having staff with both skills. The number of foreign residents in Japan is increasing, and hospitals are expected to provide medical care in foreign languages. Second, hospitals can provide better experiences to foreign patients by having staff with both skills. Foreign patients can feel more secure and comfortable by receiving medical care in their languages. Therefore, I think the number of hospitals that have staff with both foreign language skills and medical knowledge to help foreign patients will increase in the future.
